Two-Day International Conference

"Emergence of ISIS in Middle East and its Implications for South Asia"

(08th-09th December, 2015)

Concept Note

The issue of non-traditional threats to international security is recognized as widespread and serious phenomenon nowadays. The mounting threat posed by non-state actors, such as ISIS, is widely meant to dismantle state practices. The emergence of Islamic State has shaped a new battlefield in the Muslim World and generated a new debate in world politics. The ISIS is a well-equipped and an organized network, emerging in Middle East, and actively creating the covert network of likeminded groups and individuals across the globe. This may lead to chaotic situation in the region, and the spillover effects of ISIS practices in the Middle East may potentially disturb the South Asian region. In past rapid transformations that took place in Middle East, starting from Gulf wars to Arab Spring, affected South Asia in one way or the other.

The strategic shift in the regional security architecture of Middle East has augmented the stealthy Jihadi outfits of South Asia. It is to be noted that South Asia is a breeding ground for extremists because of social, political, economic and ideological discrepancies. The changing regional dynamics of South Asia with the secretly evolving network of terrorist organizations and its connections with other illicit militant groups have upset the security mechanisms of the regional states.

The upcoming conference aims to highlight the emergence of ISIS in Middle East and its implications for South Asia. More specifically, the conference is an endeavor to comprehend the violent role of the ISIS, and its potential expansion towards South Asia.
