CALL FOR PAPERS

Challenging an existing authority, an age long developed belief creates uproar, a dislike and discouragement. While being humans, we cannot refrain from inquiry; due to the emotional human limitations, we are afraid of running into a dead end and even more so of finding something different from what we have always believed in and accepted as the truth. We at the NUML Journal of Critical Inquiry invite you to step up and investigate, to question and to challenge and to prove what you believe to be there. The NUML Journal of Critical Inquiry encourages the impulse to challenge the outdated and create practices based on innovation of thought and research. We call for papers that engage a deconstructive/theoretical/ideological critique of the standardized predicament as well as offer an intellectually challenging education that is international in scope, interactive in process, and interdisciplinary in content and approach.

The NUML Journal of Critical Inquiry (ISSN 2222-5706) is an academic journal of research focusing on vital issues that debate and challenge the existing positions and construct valid arguments for alternative practices, expertise and research. The NUML Journal of Critical Inquiry (JCI) accepts contributions in interdisciplinary areas of research focusing on Language, Literature, Applied Linguistics and Education. Contributions that bring forward new ideas in pedagogy and creative thinking, generating new knowledge(s) through reasoning and research are welcomed. The journal also accepts Book Reviews in the related areas.

If you are interested in submitting papers, please consult the NUML JCI. Note for Contributors link on <http://www.numl.edu.pk/> and respond.
